

Supplies:

- Paper
- Scissors
- Coloring supplies (markers, colored pencils, pastels, oil pastels, crayons, paints)
- A hat or bag

Steps:

- Gather supplies.
- Write objects found around the house like plants, animals or foods on small pieces of paper, cut them into squares and put them in a hat or bag.
- Give the hat a toss and choose 3 pieces of paper from the hat. These objects will be your inspiration! Using the objects, you picked, create a drawing that combines all three objects into one, like a flying house cat or a sun fish wearing a suit.
- Color in your creation. You can always pick more cards to add to your drawing.
- To take your project to the next level try writing a story to go along with your artwork or make a sculpture of it out of clay or found objects.

About Salvador Dali and Surrealism

- Salvador Dali was born in May of 1904 in Catalonia, Spain.
- Dali was involved with the art movement Surrealism. These artists made artwork of scenes that look bizarre or impossible in real life.
- Dali made paintings, sculptures and films about the dreams he had. He painted melting clocks, floating eyes and rocks that look like bodies.
- He often included the Spanish landscape around where he grew up in his paintings. This landscape can be seen in what is considered the most famous Surrealism painting called The Persistence of Memory.
- Dali and other Surrealist artists liked to make art by mixing two different things together to make something new. They wanted this new object to be both funny and scary at the same time. A good example of this is called Lobster Telephone, which Dali created in 1936.
